If I were founding a university I would found first a smoking room; then when I had a little more money in hand I would found a dormitory; then after that, or more probably with it, a decent reading room and a library. After that, if I still had more money that I couldn't use, I would hire a professor and get some textbooks
— Stephen Leacock (1896-1944) Oxford As I See It

Because a college student is always broke, he never has any problem finding something to write home about.

Remember this also,
and be well persuaded of its truth;
The future is not in the hands of Fate,
but in ours.

Making Too Much Of Life

Making Too much of life
Like it won't come around again.
Leaving it round-shouldered and limping
Without too much weight on its ankles
Demanding what it may never do.
Waiting for what may never be.
Missing the eagles gathered on the corner,
And cursing the pigeons instead.
Who said life should do it all?
Love every moment, peace beyond words,
A friend who finally understands?
Life is a mystery man
Making few promises, stumbling in and out,
As generous in chance as in careful plans.
Death to the architects and calculating builders
Who lay foundations!
Life is no building, no suble blueprint.
It is as unpredictable as clouds,
As forgetful as spring rains,
Hardly impressed with equality or justice or truth,
Willing to ignore my faults and failures
. . . if I am.

. . . James Kavanaugh

STUDENT LIFE

A Time To Learn

Each one of you — that is, each one of you that is worth his salt — is struggling with certain questions. You are asking yourselves and perhaps your friends: What is life? What is success? What is happiness? What is good? And in the dark of the night you are asking yourself: What am I? What do I want? Where am I going? Those questions you must ask, somehow, sometime; and the answers you find for them will determine largely what you will become and what you will find. Primarily, you have come to college to learn the answers to these questions, and your life depends on the answers. Each one of you will have to reach his own conclusions, since no one can reach them for you. Two thousand years ago, Pilate asked: "What is truth?" Millions have repeated the question, thousands have striven to answer it — and it remains the enigma of the world. You, too, must strive to answer it. You probably will never succeed, but in striving you will attain something like education; you will learn something like wisdom. Out of the confusion, the contraditions, the eternal mysteris, you will evolve a philosophy of life — and to evolve that philosophy is your primary purpose in coming to college.

Good Times, Bad Times:

The Freshman Experience

Freshman year. Surviving those unavoidable first-year crises makes it quite a challenge, and the first few weeks are usually the roughest.

However, the typical trials, traumas, and challenges facing most freshmen are somewhat lessened at Loyola. According to the majority of those interviewed, the relaxed atmosphere and friendly people made the transition from high school to college much easier. "Loyola, being a small college, has a lot of advantages. The pressures are a lot less because it's much easier to make personal contacts with teachers and students than it would be in a larger university," says Carla Gauthier, a Communications major.

Freshman year is perhaps the most intense period of personal growth. You're in a totally new, unrestricted environment. Classes are different and much more challenging than in high school. You are your own boss and it's totally up to you whether you cut a class, cram the night before a test, or not study at all. No one is checking up on your behavior. "You have more freedom as well as more responsibility, which gives you a greater sense of maturity," says Karen Lang. Adds Mary Brennan, "You have to take a lot more initiative because there's no one hanging over you, telling you what to do."

Finally, freshmen share a common bond. Most are experiencing similar feelings of fear and uncertainty. Surprisingly enough, most college students will look back on their freshman year with pleasure and a certain sense of triumph.

Why Did You Come To Loyola?

Indulging in refreshments one evening at the famed college night spot, "The Boot," a combination Loyola-Tulane hangout, I noticed a girl wearing a most unusual garment. She was clothed in a white T-shirt, the back of which epitomized, in large black letters, the essence of a first-week-of-school conversaton: "HI! WHAT'S YOUR NAME? WHERE ARE YOU FROM? WHAT'S YOUR MAJOR? WHY DID YOU COME TO LOYOLA?" It struck me as extremely amusing; an innovative approach to breaking the academic ice.

Unfortunately, these routine — and God knows, boring — questions are a necessary part of college introductions. However redundant they may be, we all, at some time or another, will either be asked them or will be asking them. Alas, in my numerous social endeavors at Loyola University, I was no exception. However, I did take note of several replies, contrary to the popular practice of letting them go in one ear and out the other. My favorite question to ask was, "Why did you come to Loyola?" I received a variety of responses and numerous instances of eye-rolling and sighs, but nevertheless, the consensus stands as follows:

Several Communications students were lured to New Orleans by the fact that Loyola is known for its excellent Communications department. Another of Loyola's departmental assets is the Dental Hygiene Program, which incorporates vocational training with practical experience in the clinic.

Still other students mentioned that Loyola has a good Music school, especially if one is interested in Jazz, and that New Orleans' environment is one that would be conducive to musical endeavors.

Some students were offered financial aid or academic scholarships and came to Loyola for this reason. Others preferred the environment produced by a small university, citing social and academic advantages to such an arrangement. For instance, Ursula Clarke, a freshman from Baton Rouge, enrolled here after viewing both Loyola and Newcomb because she felt "Loyola had more to offer."

Many students came to Loyola under recommendations from friends and relatives, and one sophomore in Special Education cited job availability after graduation as a primary concern.

Others, such as freshman Stephanie Hart, used to the cold winters of Cape May, New Jersey, came to Loyola "because it's warm here."

It is only fair to mention, however reluctantly, that a large number of out-of-state students were drawn to Loyola not because of its academic standing or departmental strengths, but rather because of its location in "The City That Care Forgot." Many had never been to New Orleans and thought that it would be an exciting city to live in, both interesting and culturally abundant. Some also expressed a desire to participate first-hand in the annual tradition of Mardi Gras.

As one can see, the responses are as varied as the people they came from. Loyola, or any university for that matter, is a virtual melting pot of people, cultures and ideas, which in itself is a learning experience. So however bored one may get with first-week-of-school conversations, they are necessary and can be interesting if one takes the time to listen. One does not have to be endowed with a surplus of conversational skills to ask a few simple questions. And for those who are, perhaps they can come up with a creative and different approach to academic introductions, as the example of the T-shirt illustrates.

So grit your teeth, put on a smile, and ask politely with some degree of genuine interest, "Why did you come to Loyola?" To a timid freshman it may mean the difference between beginning a fulfilling academic school year or turning on his heels and heading home.

Commuter Students

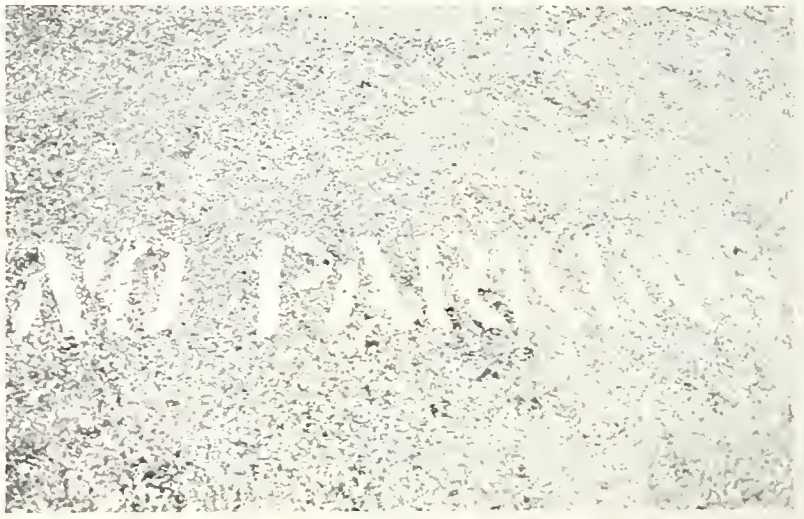
"I had to park ten blocks away!" "A dance last weekend? I didn't even know about it." " My car got towed — can you drive me to the pound?" These statements are often heard from 3,560 students at Loyola, that is, the commuter students. Over 80% of the university's total enrollment is composed of commuters, leaving only 843 people who do not face the problems of parking and keeping up with campus activities. Although many commuters feel that the residents are favored by the university, it is not that way at all. Dorm students naturally hear more about special events around school since they are constantly on campus, but at Loyola information regarding numerous activities is posted everywhere. Commuters must learn to keep their eyes and ears open at all times!

Parking is the biggest complaint of the New Orleans natives, as the area around Loyola is composed of grammer and high schools, in addition to other colleges, which means thousands of parking places needed daily. A big consolation to Loyola students, though, is that the campus itself is so small that the surrounding blocks where parking is available can be thought of as an extension of the actual university. Walking from one's car to Loyola is like walking across most college campuses.

While Loyola residents have most of the conveniences of school, commuters have a steady diet of homecooked meals, which is the main aspect of home missed by dorm students. Although many people take their mothers' cooking for granted, a week of SAGA's food can make even the most independent coed homesick. Nothing can compare to the treats and love Mom puts into her meals.

The familiarity of New Orleans, the ease of living at home, and the uniqueness of Loyola all contribute to the commuter students' enjoyment of college life. Even the convenience of walking directly from bed across the quad to 8 a.m. classes could not persuade many native New Orleanians to leave Loyola and their city of seafood and fun.

— Maureen King



Resident Hall Students

In the eyes of many commuter students, the only advantage to living on campus is the convenience of hopping out of bed at 8:20 for an 8:30 class. There are, however, hidden advantages that one does not see until one experiences dorm life. I think I am fortunate to be one of the few college students to know what it is like to be a commuter as well as a " resident hall" student.

Granted, life can be a jungle in the dorms. For instance, it is not easy to study for a midterm when the guy across the hall plays his new "Saturday Night Fever" album over and over — at a level louder than a quadrophonic discoteque. Then you have persons who find entertainment in pulling the fire alarm at 4 a.m.

There are a few other aggravations, such as when the elevators are broken and you live on the sixth floor. Or when your roommate is the "Oscar" type and you are the "Felix" type.

Fortunately, in most instances these are isolated cases and not the norm. For many resident students, just the opportunity to get away from home outways any advantages of home life. And many students have noticed how much more they can appreciate home by being away. We really take our family for granted, like we do the t.v. or car or phone. This is a reciprocal phenomenan. The people "back home" seem to appreciate you more when you return for the holidays.

Just to live in an area far from home is a learning experience in itself. In coming to New Orleans (from Pennsylvania), I was surprised to find that not everyone here speaks "southern", like Flo on the t.v. show "Alice." While I miss the change of seasons, especially autumn, with its hues of oranges, yellows and reds, I like the milder winters in New Orleans. Whether you live at home or in the residence hall, it's a compromise situation. While it's almost impossible to bring all the comforts of home into the dorm room, it's nice to have a community of friends within walking distance. It's nice to have a room to go to in-between classes. It's nice to have the extra time you would normally spend in commuting and it' s easier to get involved in campus activities when you live on campus.

While not too many people will deny home as being more comfortable, it is kind of nice to be able to hop out of bed at 8:20 for an 8:30 class.

CHECK US OUT!

The Student Government Association of Loyola University is a political organization, the purpose of which is to promote and protect student rights; and to determine, clarify, and enunciate student policies and opinions to the university community. While the legislative body is composed of elected representatives, there are various committees of which the general student body is not only welcomed, but in fact encouraged to join. Anyone interested in inquiring about any such committee may do so. All that is required is that you stop by the S.G.A. office and volunteer your services.

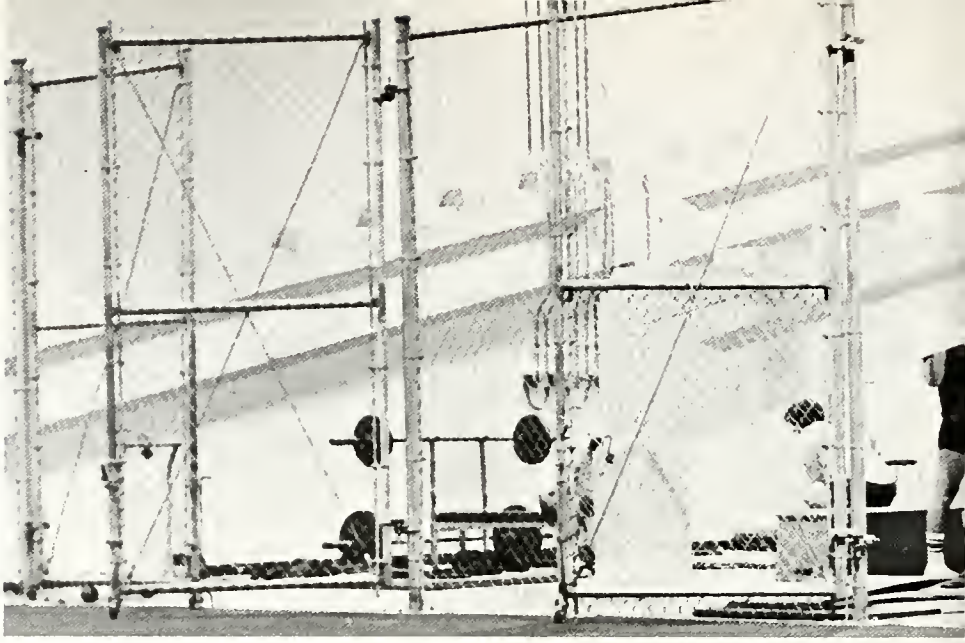
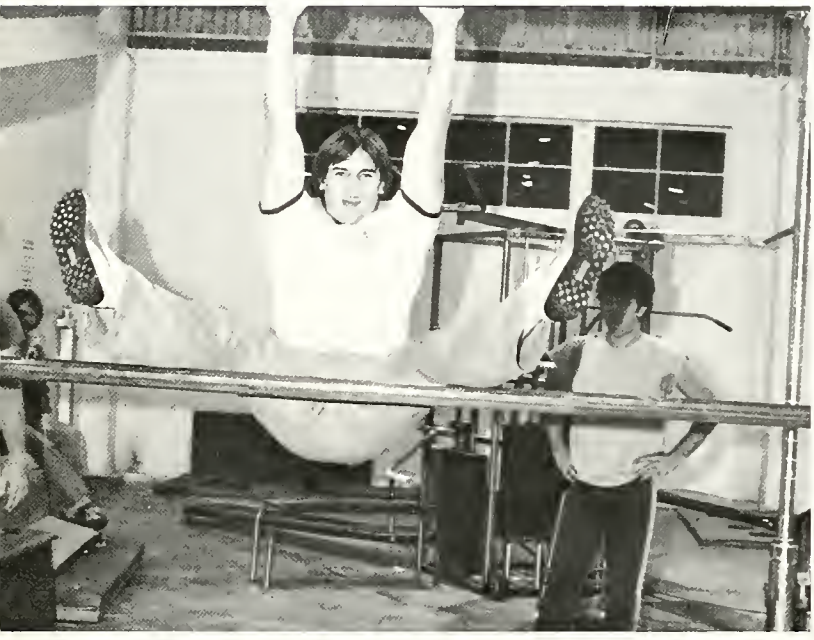
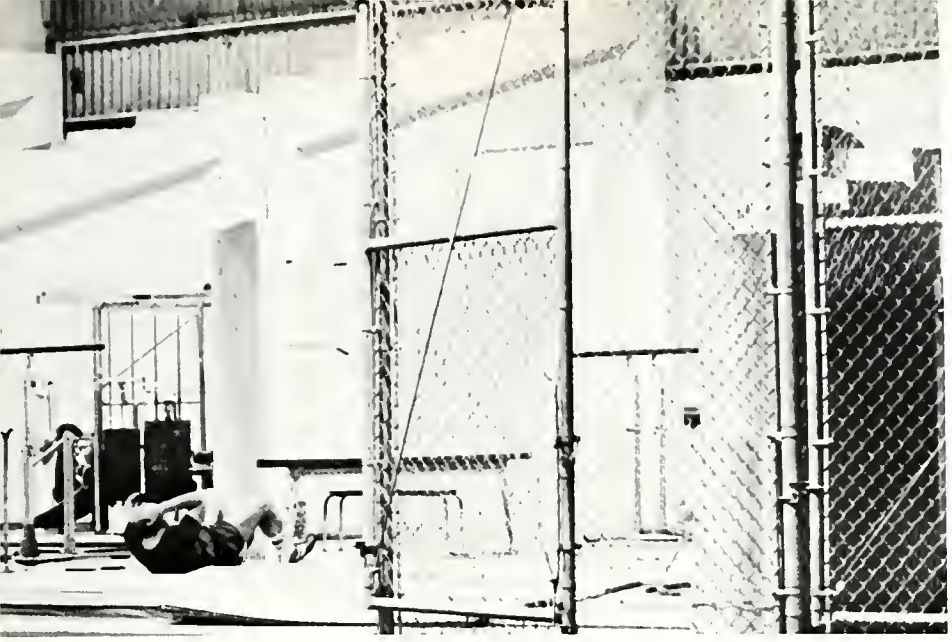
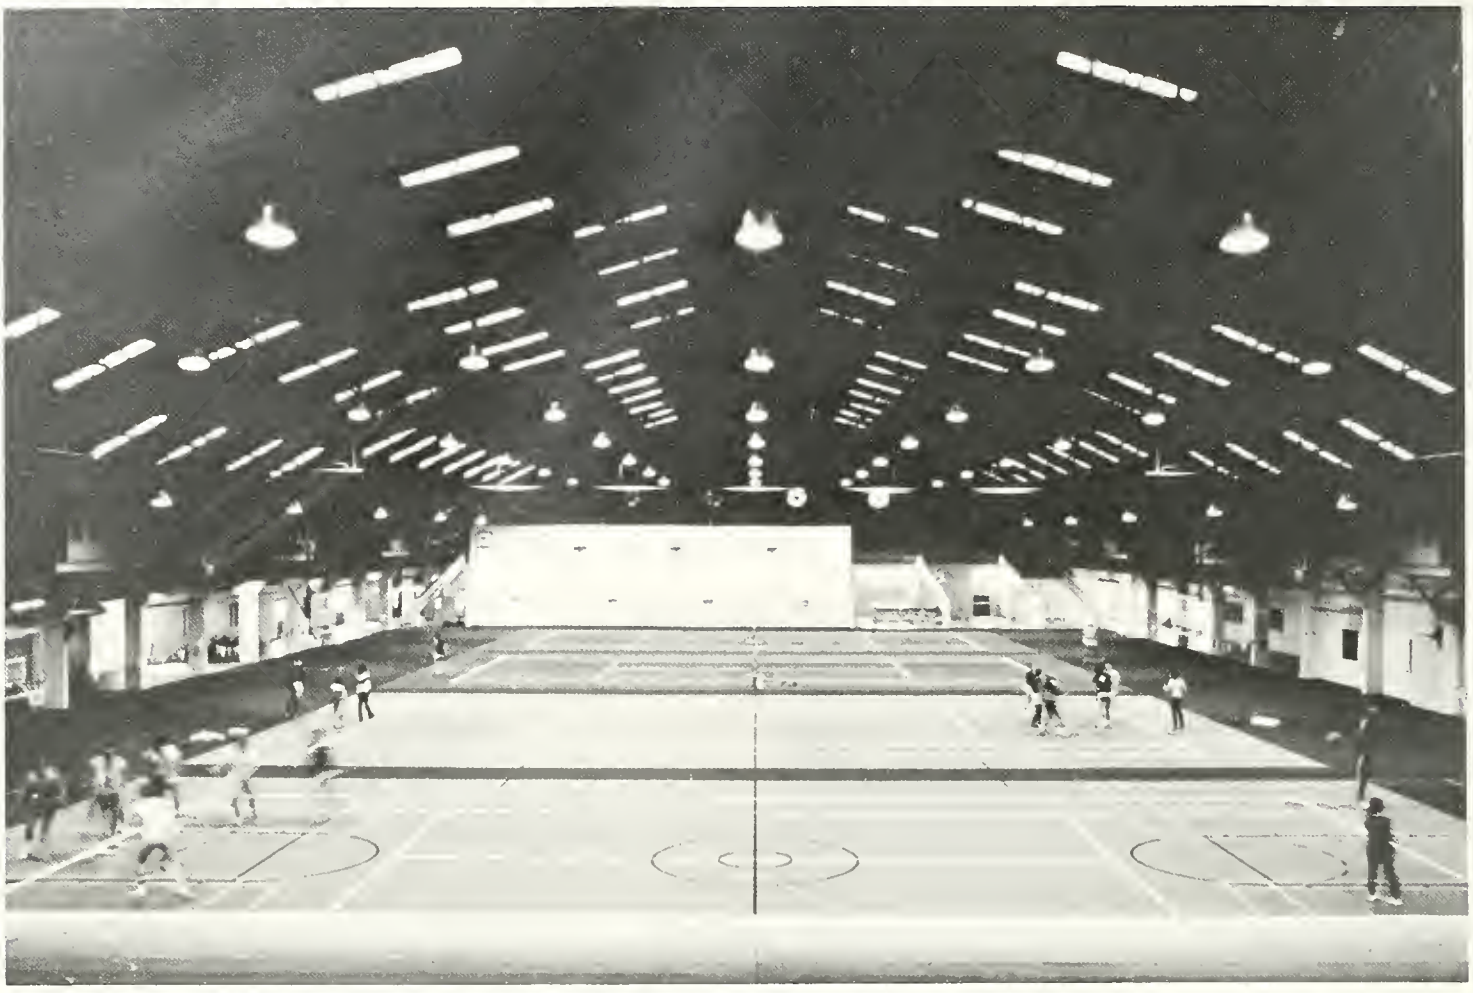
Personal Recreation









The Loyola Recreation and Intramural Center exists . . .

To encourage competition for the fun of playing and not for possible awards.

To serve the total recreational needs of the University Community by means of a carefully devised program of activities which will reach the largest number of individuals the greatest number of times, and which will have such breadth and variety that all interests will be served.

To emphasize events and activities that will have both inschool value and later adult carry-over attraction.

To eliminate any forces that might tend to reduce the maximum of sociability and good will among all students, faculty and staff members participating.

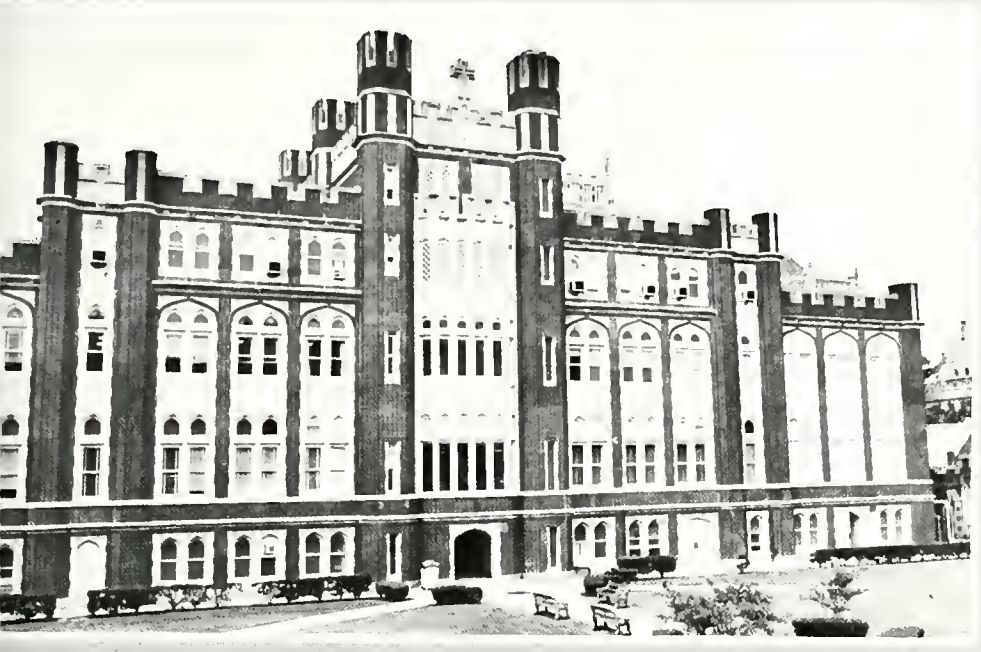
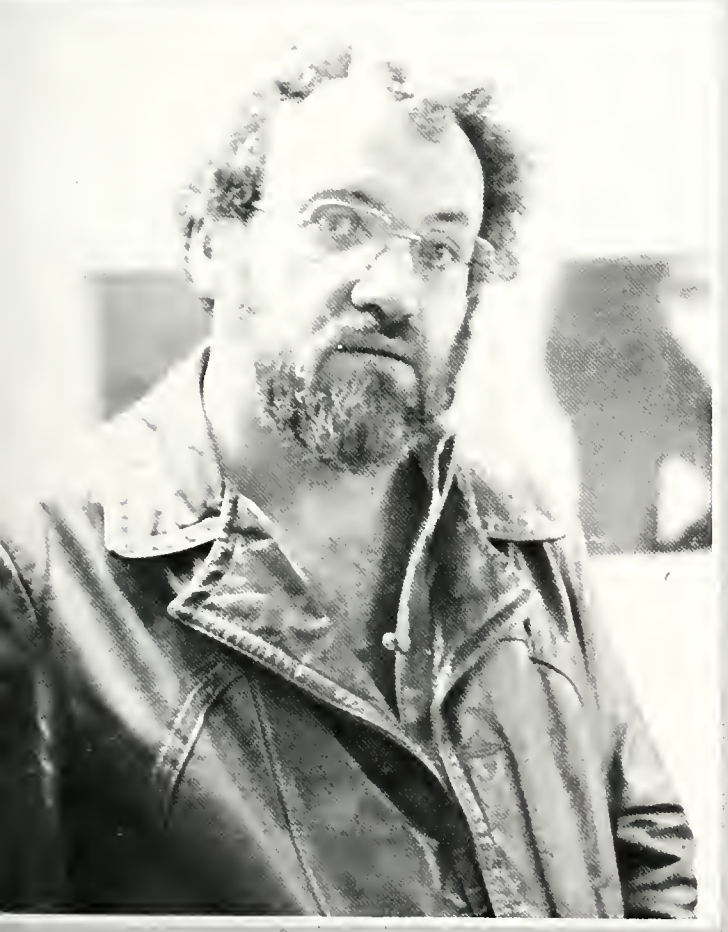
Among Us You May Walk When Bark Is Red With Rain And Earth, Pure.





BUT YOUR TEARS
WILL FLOW AS RAIN,
AND A DEMON'S JOY
LIKE WIND
RUSHED THROUGH AND ABOVE
WITH THE SUN

AMONG US
FIND YOURSELF OR WHAT YOU WILL
IN THE RAIN:
WHAT GOD OR GODDESS
YOU WILL PLAY — THE WETNESS
OR THE FAUN HIMSELF.

DANNA CENTER

BUT RUN YOUR COURSE
BEHIND YOUR EYES, AND WITH A CHILL
WARM YOURSELF AND YOUR HAPPINESS

FOR AMONG US
THE MUDDY TASTE
OF WATER
AND FALLEN LEAVES IS CLEAN AS A SPRING AND FALL.

FIND YOUR OWN RAIN IN THE WIND TODAY.
HIS IS NOT YOURS TODAY.
